"Yes, sir. I have to say that I am as theroughly innocent of this offense as any other man in this courthouse, and that I hope some day I will have an opportunity to vindicate my innocence."

"The point of your guilt, or innocence," declared the court, "is a matter that was left to the jury. This court, thank God, dld not have to pass upon it. The jury have decided after a fair and impartial trial that you were guilty of the offense, and it only remains for me to pass the sentence of the law, which is that you be taken to the county jail of Albemarle county, which is also used as the city fail of Charlottesyllic, and be therein confined in solitary confinement until the sail of Charlottesville, and be therein confined in solitary confinement until the 20th day of January next; that on that day between the hours of sunrise and sunset you be taken from your place of confinement to some place within the enclosure of the said jall and there be hanged by the neck until you are dead. And may God have mercy on your soul."

Back in His Cell.

The trial was over. McCue sat down and in a moment more the session of the court was at an end. Judge Morris, still much affected, left the stand. He approached the prisoner. For the first time since the trial began, he shook hands with the murderer and expressed his sorrow at what must be. Daring the few moments that followed, McCue, surrounded by the attorneys, stood and conversed with the judge, chiefly concerning the privileges that would be allowed to him. In prison. Then he left the room and joined his relatives on the outside. A crowd of silent and subdued people watched him, as he moved off in the direction of the jail.

Horeafter a guard will be constantly in the presence of the prisoner. Every consideration allowed by law will be given him, but he will be carefully watched. After he reached the jail two newspaper men sent their cards to the call inviting the soiltary man to make any statement he desired to the public. He rotained the cards and returned, his thanks for the opportunity offered, but declared that under the circumstances he did not care at this time to say anything for publication.

What Will Court Do?

What Will Court Do?

What Will Court Do?

In this way passed the last day of the McCue murder trial. In so far as the Corporation Court of Charlottesville is concerned, the sensational case is at an end. Future events depend upon the action of the Court of Appeals and the Governor of Virginia. A pardon or a commutation of sentence is hardly possible. Public interest centers, therefore, around the fight that will be made in the superior court. Judge Morris has given the attorneys

Judge Morris has given the attorneys for defense until Saturday. November 19th, in which to prepare the bill of exceptions. This bill will be slened by the judge and will then be taken to the Court of Appeals on an application for a writ of error. If the writ is granted a new trial will be ordered; if it is not, then, in words of Mr. Lee himself, "all will be

There are undoubted points of strength in the contention that will be made by the defense. The public at large do not appear to expect the verdict to be set aside, but this lay opinion, based more upon sentiment than upon any deep and discerning insight into the issues involved, is not shared by many men skilled in the law. In the opinion of the latter, McCue may yet have a chance for his life.

In a few moments a party of the relatives of the prisoner came in. He kissed them all tenderly and then sai down again and lifted his little son to his knee. Besides the boy, there were in the group who had charge of the jury during the case, was placed on the stand. He said that since the trial was opened a number of the jurymen—perhaps two-thirds—had read newspapers. The newspaper most exensively read was .The Times-Dispatch, of Richmond. The witness equid not recall distinctly, whether any other papers had been read or not. It was also impossible for him to say positively whether or not the Nows Leader, of Richmond, or the Progress, of Charlotteswille, had been read by the jary to any extent. He recalled one occasion when Mr. Parsons left the breakfast table and bought several copies of the News Leader, which he handed around among his fellow-jurymen.

"Did you caution the members of the jury against reading anything about the trial?" asked Mr. Glimer.
"I did, several times."
Deputy Noel, who was associated with Woods in caring for the jury, took the stand. He, too, said the gentlemen had frequently read the newspapers, but to the best of his knowledge and belief they had read nothing concerning the case in which they were then sitting.

"Did you caution the members of the

"I cautioned them repeatedly," replied Mr. Noel.

This constituted the sum and substance of the testimony. Mr. Lee then offered as a part of the record a file of The Times-Dispatch from October 18th tal) November 5th, inclusive; of the News Leader, from October 18th to November 4th, inclusive, and of the Charlottesville Progress, from October 18th to November 4th, inclusive. Mr. Gilmer objected on the ground that there was no evidence to show that the invymen had read all the ground that there was no evidence to show that the jurymen had rend all the papers introduced, and that the gentlemen of the defense must present to the court the particular articles and headlines read by each of the jurymen. The court, however, permitted the introduction of the papers, declaring that they would have to be considered in connection with the statements made by each of the jurymen on Saturday last.

Motions Overruled.

After a brief conference the attorneys would submit the motions to the court without argument. Judge Morris there upon took up the record of the proceed without argument. Judge More's thereupon took up the record of the proceedings, and, referring to the statement of Mr. Coleman, made on Saturday, overruled the motions separately and colloctively. His ruling may be summarized as follows:

Because of erroneous rulings of the court during the progress of the trial in respect to the admissibility of evidence manifed to be asked and such as were not permitted to be asked and such as were not permitted to be asked. The court has received no new light that would cause it to after its previous rulings on this point.
Because of the misdirections by the court in the instructions given to the jury, etc.: The court labored to avoid any mistake in this matter, and believes there was none. If any mistake was made, the superior court will have to find it out.

Because of the amendments made by the court in certain instructions asked for by the accused: In reference to this motion the court repeats its statement made in connection with the motion immediately preceding:

Bequage of the statement made by Captain Woods in the court-room in respect to his having refused a retainer in mediately preceding.

Bequise of the statement made by Captain Woods in the court-room in respect to his having refused a retainer in this case. The court could not set aside the verdlet on this ground. It was, in fact, at a loss to comprehend the praciso
for the motion. The court understoo
for the motion. The court understoo that the statement was made with the consent of both sides. In the opinion of the court Captain Woods had not proceded to the point where his remarks could have had any possible effect upon the jury.

could have had any possible effect upon the jury.

Because the jurymen were permitted during the progress of the tirlal to read newspapers, and did read them: The court confesses that this is the only ground that caused it any trouble. In reviewing it the court had to take into consideration the testimony of the jurymen themselves. It had not been shown that any of them were influenced in any way by what they may have seen or read in the newspapers. The court therefore, overruled this motion also, "in short," declared Judge Morris, in conclusion, "the court overrules the motion of the defense to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial."

To Arrest Judgment.

To Arrest Judgment.

To Arrest Judgment.

The utmost quiet prevailed in the courtroem. Mr. Coleman arose and made a motion for an arrest of judgment. He fill this on the ground that the verdict of the jury was insufficient to support a judgment for murder in the first degree. The jury had found the prisoner "guilty as charged in the within indictment of murder in the first degree." The indictment was simply for murder. Under it a conviction might have been had for murder in the first or second degree or for mandaughter, voluntary or involuntary. The speaker laid great stress upon the language "guilty as charged" and declared that the prisoner was charged simply with murder. It would be an error for His Honor to assume the responsibility of determining the degree of guilt; he could not undertake to say of what the jury had found the prisoner guilty.

The court was of the opinion that the latter part of the verdict showed clearly the degree of the murder of which the jury had found the prisoner guilty. In the opinion of the court the language of the verdict was sufficient. The court thereupen overruled this motion also, The defense noted an exception.

Sentence Passed.

The proceedings were then over. In the presence of a death-like stillness the court passed autence upon the prisoner. Within an hour after the session began the people were on the streets again.

Popular Nebraskan Training to Put Democracy on New Lines.

THE FEAR OF SOCIALISM

Battle Lines May be Drawn Between the Radicals and Conservatives.

By Walter Edward Harris.

(Special From a Staff Correspondent.) NEW YORK, November 9,-Those Dem ocrats, who conducted the campaign against Roosevelt, are more deeply impressed now with the need of conser vatism in the Democratic party than they were when they fought for and secured the nomination of Parker. Two facts have been most deeply impressed upon me to-day in the course of conversations with Democrats of various shades of boilef, one is that the conservative element of the party must struggle as never before to prevent the pendulum swinging further backward than it did eight or four years ago. The other fact was the frequently expressed lief that a Southern man should be up by the Democrats to make the fight in 1908. There will be made a tremendous effort on the part of the most radical element of the Democratic party to gain control of the organization and nominate the candidate in 1908.

Thirsting for Control.

Mr. Bryan has said openly a number of times in the past three months that it was hoped that he and his friends would have control of the organization after the election. He has a tremendous following in the party, exclusive of those loyal Democrats who will support the ticket nominated whether the platform represents their exact opinions or not. When to this class are added the Populists and Socialists, it will be readily seen that he will have a most formidable following. It is easy to see right now that the first great political struggle of the next four years will be between the conservative and radical Democracy for the control of the party of eracy for the control of the party of ganization. A most significant fact is who did not vote the Democratic ticket this year are being put forward as fair representatives of the class, which should the late Populist presidential candidate man thoroughly representative of the hopes and the alms of true Democracy. There can be no question that the tremendous majorities received by Mr. Roosevelt in many of the States, were in part due to the refusal of many supporters of Mr. Bryan four years ago to vote for the Democratic monines this year. Complete returns will show this even more clearly than is apparent now. An analysis of the official returns of the election is confidently expected to show that the Socialist yote was much larger this year than ever before. This will be accounted for in pant by the be accounted for in part by the supported Mr. Bryan, who has declared for government ownership of railroads, went over to the Socialists this year, the increased Socialist vote expected to o shown will also be die largely to the

Will Make Socialists. I voice the sentiment of two of the clearest headed men in the Democratic party, when I say that four years more of oppression by tariff and trusts will make about as many Socialists as Democrats. It is certain that it will make the radical element of the Democratic party many thousands stronger than it is to-day. It is probable that never before in the history of the political parties of this country has it been so easy to foresee events as it is to forecast ties of this country has it been so casy to foresee events as it is to forcesse the struggle, which will be fought out within the Democratic party before an other President shall have been chosen. To the mere student, the situation is interesting; to the partisan merely it is one promising excitement, but to the serious-minded citizen, regardless of party, who expects to live the balance of his days beneath the Stars and Stripes, the conditions which confront the party which was detented by a majority of thirteen hundred thousand in yesterday's election, are so serious as to demund the most careful thought and the most particular endeavor.

DENVER, COL., Nov. 5.—Roosevelt's plurality in Colorado has been increased by latter returns and may run above 15.00. Republicans and Democrats claim the election of Governor and congressmen at large, and the Republicans threaten to comiest the State election on the grounds of alleged frauds in Denver. Citizen volunteers and the police are now reinforcing the garrisons of the forts, according to the garrisons of the forts, according to the stories of Chinese arriving here, sixty of whom left Port Arthur on November 8th, owing to the high price of food. So many men were killed on both sides during the last assault that many bodies lay unburied for days, and in some instances dogs, which had been driften from the town, assuaged their hunger by eating the dead. In a few cases where this was seen the horror-stricken Russian sharpshooters killed the dogs.
